

Programs/classes must:

- Include a comment in each class to identify yourself (name / student number)
- Use meaningful variable and method names

Caution: Do not use

- the `break` statement to exit from a loop,
- the `continue` statement to bypass remaining code in a loop,
- arrays.

This assignment requires you to develop 2 classes: Product and Category organized as

The Product class has fields `id`, `name`, `quantity on hand`, and `category`. It must have getters and setters for each field, and a `toString` method.

The Category class has two fields: a category name and a product list. It must have getters and setters, a `toString` method, and a method so a product can be added to the product list.

Develop a third class Search that is used to test your class implementations. There are 3 things Search must do:

1. Create 8 category instances (see below) and keep these in an array list.
2. Create each product instance indicated in `Readme.txt`. Each product has an `id`, `name`, `quantity on hand`, and a category it belongs to. As each product is created it must be added to the product list for the appropriate category.

When reading `Readme.txt` we recommend that you read a line

String line = f.nextLine();

and then with another scanner, get each field e.g.

Scanner s = new Scanner(line).useDelimiter(",");

String category = s.next();

3. Prompt the user for a category name, and then display the products (`id`, `name`, `quantity on hand`) for that product. Keep prompting and displaying until the user enters `END`.
